

How To PROPERLY Compliment A Woman

Do you remember how many times you tried to impress a woman with your complimentary words about her and she stared at you with anger? Or she hints to you that she is not interested. Ya, it happens, when you appear too aggressive or tasteless, when complimenting woman.

Most of the men think that women love to hear good comments about their body structure. They think that generic compliments such as "You look beautiful tonight, you look gorgeous, your eyes are beautiful" etc. can impress the women very easily. But it is not so true. Women prefer to be COMPLIMENTED on actions instead OF on their looks. I don't say that women HATE enjoying compliments about their figure but women prefer to be commented on actions instead on their looks.

The compliments based on her appearance make her feel like an object. Some tips are given below that could help you to compliment a woman properly:

Made them feel special: Women love to feel special. Find something about her that is totally unique to her, even if she might consider it a flaw. You should find out something that would make her feel that she stands out among all others. Every girl is unique and therefore different. The secret is in finding what makes each one feel special.

Be honest: Your compliment should sound genuine. If you act genuine around a woman, she will pick up on that and respect you more for your honesty. Don't make your compliments sound scripted. Make sure they come from the heart; women can sense your vibes.

Be creative while complimenting an attractive woman: If you want to compliment an attractive woman, be very specific. She may not care to hear how beautiful she is for the thousandth of times. Try to get to know her so you can compliment her intellect or personality. You can compliment her on her wit, intelligence, mind, dress and actions! Nothing is more flattering than being appreciated for more than a pretty face.

Don't try to control the conversation: When you are with the person you desire, don't try to control the conversation, let her talk. And always remember; a guy is better seen than heard, unless she asks you for your opinion. Never space out and forget what she is talking about!

If she is talking about the subject you have no idea about, you could kick something hard and say "Ow". It will probably cause her to stop and ask if you are OK. Then you can start a new conversation.

Compliment her publicly: I am not talking about the public speech. Listing all of your partner's positive points and acknowledging those in front of others would made her feel great and boost her confidence. You can say, "Martha keeps me laughing, she helps me see the humor even in the worst situations!" "Wendy is a fantastic cook, I am always so amazed that she has time to cook so well and manage everything else she has going!"

Notice changes in her: If she got a haircut, say something about it. If you notice anything else, say something about it. If she did something that she would be embarrassed about, whisper in her ear what happened.

Mind your words: Compliment her with heartfelt words, at times OTHER than when you are initiating sex. I'm not saying that a few well-spoken words don't make a woman feel more romantic. Just make sure that you are not limiting your compliments to times when you want sex, otherwise they may be discounted. Try substituting words like "beautiful", "pretty", "gorgeous", "stunning", "lovely" or even "cute" in place of words like "hot", "sexy", "fine", etc.

Words like hot and sexy have a sexual undertone, which can, again, make her, feel like an object.
